

Abstract of the Disclosure

An apparatus and method thereof includes at least one acoustic transducer for receiving acoustic emissions produced during a semiconductor fabrication process. The acoustic transducer is mounted to various mechanical components of a semiconductor processing equipment in a manner so that the acoustic transducer receives acoustic emissions produced during the fabrication process. The received acoustic emissions are analyzed in in-situ to identify and determine surface characteristics of the wafer.